Rain and hill snow moving eastwards Sunday night with ice likely to bring some travel disruption

What to expect

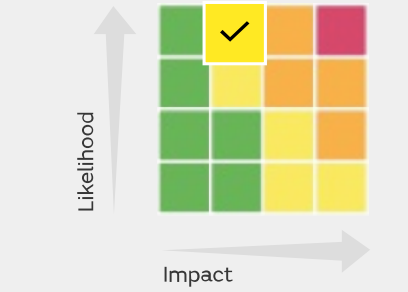
- Some injuries from slips and falls on icy surfaces
- Probably some icy patches on some untreated roads, pavements and cycle paths
- Some roads and railways may be affected with longer journey times by road, bus and train services

Further details

An area of rain and hill snow will move eastwards across northern England, southern and central Scotland on Sunday night.

As this clears surface temperatures will rapidly fall below freezing with ice expected to form quite widely, though coastal areas seeing more limited icy stretches.

Hill snow is expected above around 100 m in central Scotland and above around 300 m in southern Scotland and the far north of England with 2-6 cm of snow possible, mainly for central Scotland.



✓ High likelihood of low impacts
